Introduction to Glass Techniques Workshops

Melbourne Polytechnic in-conjunction with Glaas Inc. will hold two 'Introduction to Glass Techniques' workshops at the upcoming Conference Glass in Buildings: Past Present Potential

To be held at Melbourne Polytechnic’s Prahran Campus, on Friday 22 November and Saturday 23 November 2019. The workshops are designed for:

- people interested in glass processes and who would like to have a 'hands on' experience
- current art and design students interested in working with glass
- potential students interested in glass (Melbourne Polytechnic is currently developing glass courses to be delivered in 2020)
- architects and design and building professionals who are interested in utilising glass in buildings
- artists, designers, creatives
- in fact anyone who has a curiosity about glass, or who wants to trial a different medium.

The workshops will be held in an art space at Melbourne Polytechnic and will showcase examples of glass pieces created by various techniques by professional artists. The workshops will consist of three hours each, during which time each participant will make a small leadlight panel, and experience one of the processes of stained glass painting. Each workshop will be limited to 30 participants with three experienced glass teachers at each session.

- Three hour workshop including all materials is $160.00
- Students and concession holders are offered a 50% discount - cost $80.00
